Chair's Message

This is the eighth Annual Report of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal. Our Annual Reports coincide with the government's fiscal year; therefore, this Report will cover the period from April 1, 2005 to March 31, 2006. Ms. Bev Moore was the interim Chair until May 31, 2005. I assumed the position of Chair as of June 1, 2005.

Realizing the important task of the Tribunal in providing services to our clients, the landlords and tenants of residential premises of Ontario as well as community groups and interest groups who provide special services to their constituencies, we have formulated an Action Plan in June 2005 to address Member issues, operational/administrative support, an increase in Legal services support and duties, and to seek consultation with our stakeholders. The Action Plan is posted and updated on our website.

I appreciate the hardwork of the Vice Chairs and Members, the Director of Operations Diana Macri and all the administrative staff and as well the Director of Legal Services Branch Suzanne Graves and legal counsel thereof throughout the year and their devotion and professionalism in the fulfillment of our legislative mandate. The volume of work completed without backlog in the past year speaks for itself. We also thank our stakeholders both from the landlord and tenant groups in meeting with us and giving input to the amendment of our Rules and Guidelines.

Throughout this year, as the Tribunal's workload had increased, Vice Chairs and Members not only handled increased hearing blocks but also provided mentoring and support to the new members. Mediators have also been an important component to our dispute resolution strategy and they have engaged in meetings to better prepare themselves to meet the needs of our clients.

The call centre continues to be an important part for our dissemination of information to the public. Oftentimes disputes can be resolved at the earliest stage possible when the rights and obligations of each party are made known clearly. The call centre continues to provide much needed and timely service in the past year as in previous years. Our waiting times in answering phone calls involve only between one and two minutes for assistance from a Customer Service Representative and our abandoned calls are less than 1%.

The Tribunal remains dedicated to providing fair and effective service to all our clients. To that end, the Tribunal is committed to developing plans and programs on a continuing basis to fulfill our mission in the best possible ways.

Sincerely,

Dr. Lilian Ma, Chair
Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal

THE TENANT PROTECTION ACT

The Tenant Protection Act, 1997, (the TPA), was proclaimed on June 17, 1998 and applies to rental units in residential complexes.

Prior to the creation of the TPA, disputes between landlords and tenants were settled through the provincial court system. The court system was formal and costly, and dispute resolution often took a long time.

As well, previous legislation had a separate system for the Rent Control Program which oversaw the regulation of rent increases and provided information resources for tenants and landlords.

The need to provide a unified service to tenants and landlords led to the enactment of the Tenant Protection Act, 1997 which consolidated the two systems and created an independent, quasi-judicial agency – the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal, to administer the two prongs: dispute resolution and rent control, in relation to residential rental housing in Ontario.

The TPA set out the rights and obligations of landlords and tenants and created a process that was meant to deal with dispute resolution expeditiously and be accessible to the public who may not have legal representation.

Since proclamation, the Tenant Protection Act, 1997 has been amended by the Red Tape Reduction Act in the fiscal year of 2001-2002 and, in the fiscal year of 2002-2003, by the Government Efficiency Act. Many of the amendments clarify existing rules in the TPA while other amendments have added new rights for landlords or tenants and change how the law applies. Each year, according to the Act a new rent increase guideline is announced. The annual rent increase guideline for 2006 was announced in August and is 2.1%.

THE ROLE OF THE ONTARIO RENTAL HOUSING TRIBUNAL

The role of the Tribunal is to:

- Resolve tenant and landlord disputes through either adjudication and/or mediation
- Determine legal above guideline rent increases with respect to residential units
- Provide landlords and tenants with information about their rights and obligations

The Tribunal focuses solely on residential rental accommodation issues and offers a process that is more effective than previous systems for resolving landlord and tenant matters.

The Adjudication Process

The Tribunal was designed to create a fair but less formal environment than that in the courts for the resolution of disputes between landlords and tenants. Under the adjudication process:

- Disputes are heard in public buildings rather than courtrooms
- Tenants may choose to represent themselves and may consult an on-site legal aid representative
- The more conciliatory approach of mediation is provided by the Tribunal before the hearing process begins or on the day of the hearing. It is provided to the parties in a “without prejudice” manner so that the matter can still go to adjudication if mediation fails.
- The Tribunal’s adjudicators are trained to deal fairly and effectively with the issues. Adjudicators are Members, appointed to the Tribunal by Order In – Council. Candidates apply to the Public Appointments Secretariat and are referred to and partake in a structured interview with the Tribunal. The qualified candidates are recommended to the Minister for consideration.

Adjudicators from across the province meet formally four days a year to discuss issues. They also meet more frequently and informally in their regions. Some of them sit on committees and working groups such as the Rules and Guidelines Committee, groups to review the format of orders and other groups that gather opinions on specific issues. Members’ meetings also contain elements of on going professional development to update members on emerging issues such as amendments to the TPA and new case law, and to provide forums for members to discuss decision-making and other matters.

This year we started a series of roundtable discussions with our Vice Chairs and Members to discuss issues of importance to adjudication. As well, each region now has its own Vice Chair who is dedicated to helping the Members in their region and to manage the processes associated with quality assurance and Member training.

The Mediation Process

Mediation is offered under the Tenant Protection Act. It is often used to clarify issues and narrow the areas of dispute so that the hearing may proceed more expeditiously. It can also lead to a resolution of the matter without a hearing. Mediated settlements are more flexible in their content than Tribunal orders. This often assists parties in reaching a satisfactory conclusion to their difficulties. Mediators use their expertise on the Tenant Protection Act and their negotiation skills to assist landlords and tenants in mediating their disputes and concerns. Mediators are available most of the time at all our hearing locations.

We are trying to focus our mediation on the more complex applications. Many tenant applications benefit greatly from mediation and we concentrate much of our resources on these. We have had success in mediating Above Guideline Increase applications, which saves all parties lengthy hearings and provides a quicker resolution of the issues.

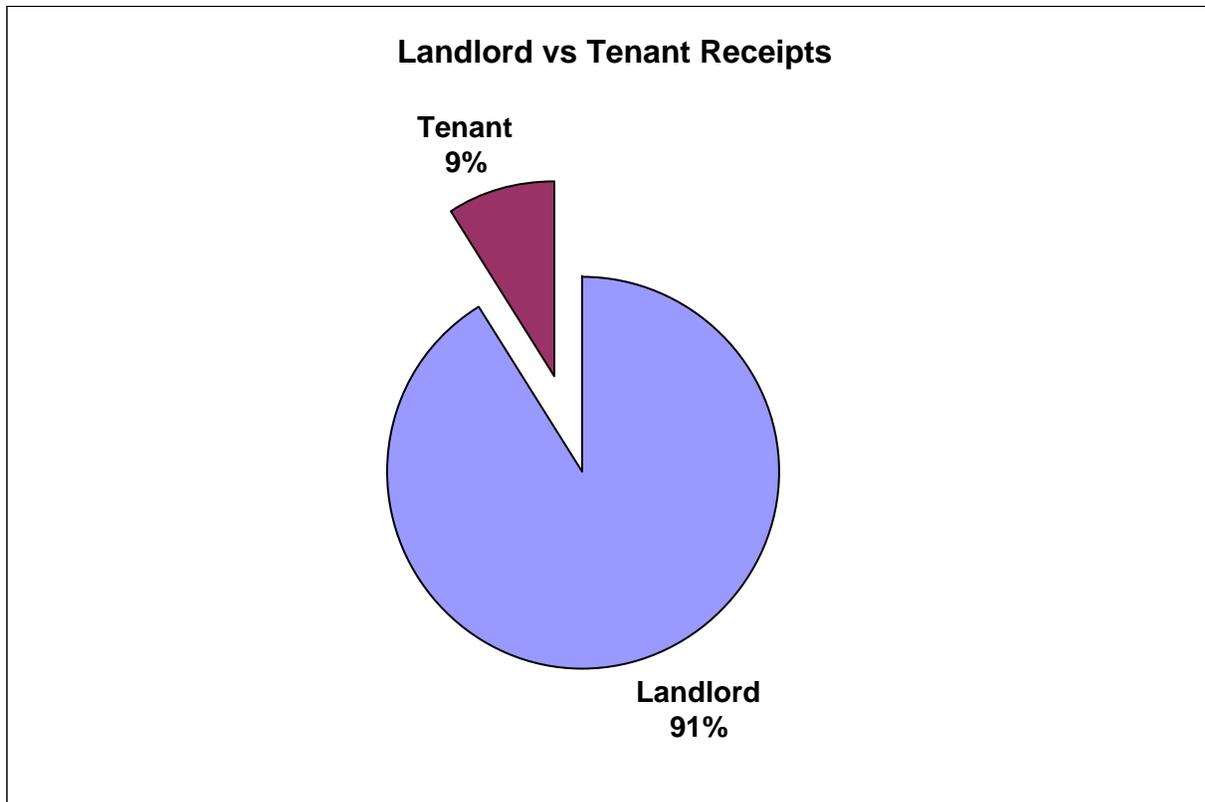

During the fiscal year 2005-2006, approximately 15 per cent of the Tribunal's applications were successfully mediated without the adjudication process. More difficult to quantify is the benefit of resolving only some of the issues in an application. Although these applications still have to be heard, the hearing takes a much shorter time because many of the issues have already been resolved through mediation.

Statistical Information for the 2005-2006 Fiscal Year

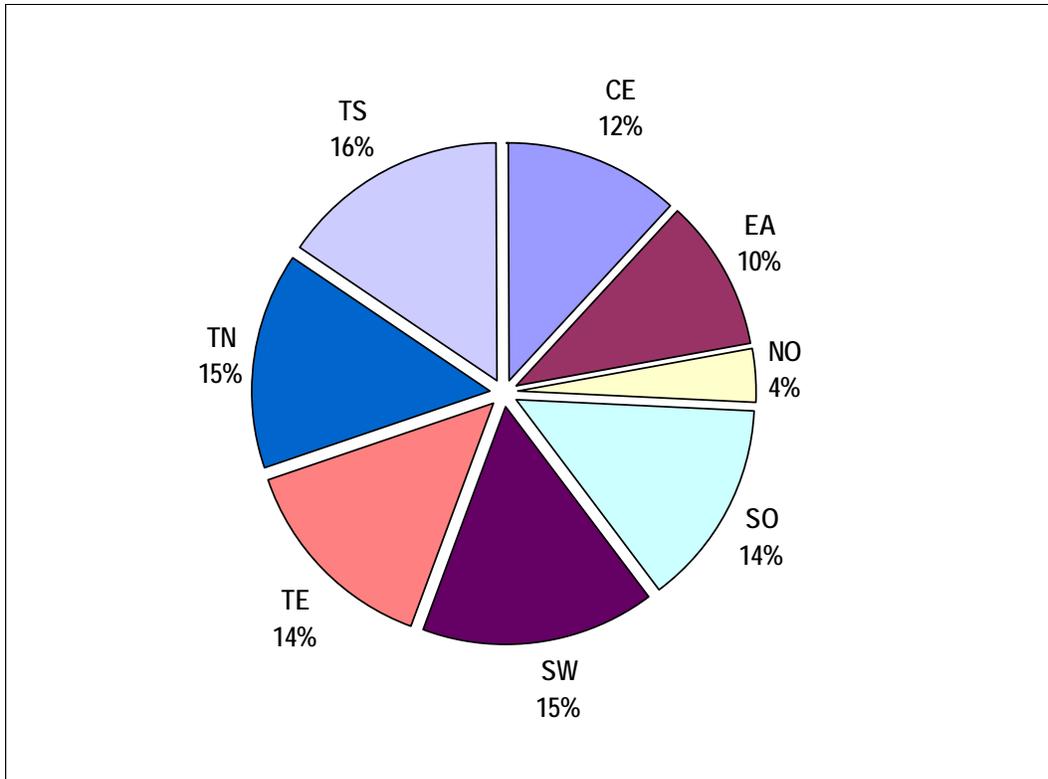

Applications

During the 2005-2006 fiscal year, the Tribunal received 81,000 applications and resolved 87,977. (Because the Tribunal resolves re-opened mediation and set-asides, some applications may generate more than one resolution.)

The distribution of application receipts for the 2005-2006 fiscal year, are reflected in the following profile:

The regional distribution of applications is as follows:

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North; and TS to Toronto South

Eviction applications have by far been in the majority since the Tribunal began in 1998. This year, the trend has continued. Of the total applications received by the Tribunal, 82 per cent were for termination of tenancies because of arrears of rent. This is slightly up from 74.64 per cent last year. Tenant applications accounted for 9 per cent of the applications filed during this fiscal year. This is up very slightly from 8 per cent last year.

An average of 251 applications for above guideline rent increases were received each year under the Rent Control Act. Under the Tenant Protection Act, during the first year of Tribunal operations, 887 applications for above guideline rent increases were received. In the fiscal year 2000-2001, 608 applications were received. During fiscal year 2002-2003, only 471 above guideline rent increase applications were received, a substantial decrease from the previous fiscal year 2001-2002 where the Tribunal received 1608. The increase for fiscal 2001-2002 in above guideline rent increase application receipts was mainly the result of landlords experiencing an extraordinary increase in the cost of utilities, specifically a spike in gas prices. During the fiscal year 2004-2005, 274 applications were received, slightly down from fiscal 2003-2004 where the Tribunal received 292 applications. During the fiscal year, 2005-2006, 209 applications for Above Guideline Increases were received which continues this downward trend.

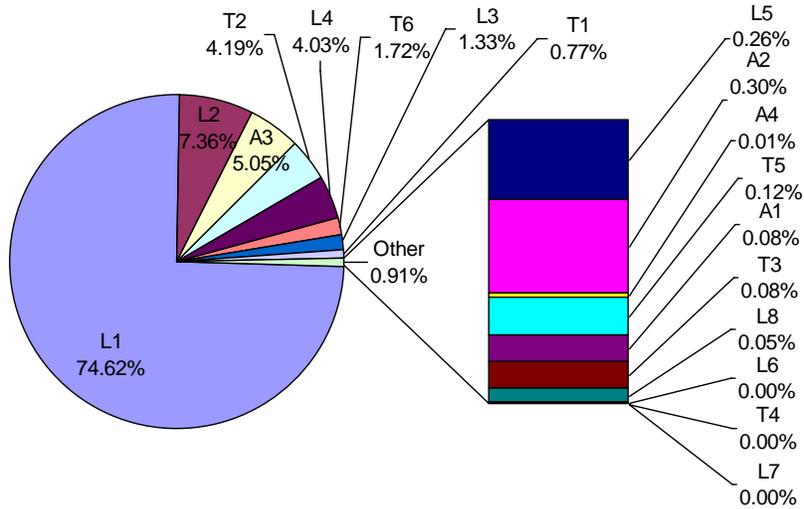

Above guideline rent increase applications continue to take a disproportionate amount of time both for adjudicators and staff. These applications continue to make up less than 1 per cent of the total applications received, and account for 20 per cent of the Tribunal's time.

Mediation is helping us with this workload, although we continue to look for other ways to increase our efficiency and speed up the resolution process.

The chart on the following page shows the distribution of the Tribunal's workload, by type of application and disposition method (default or hearing). This does not include mediated settlements.

Application Resolution

The Tribunal strives to resolve applications expeditiously. The Tribunal's goal is to maintain only one month's receipts as open files. Once again this fiscal year, we have been successful in achieving this goal. Most orders are issued within 20 days of filing the application and more complex orders are issued within 25 days.

The chart below indicates that receipts and resolutions remained constant during the year.

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North; and TS to Toronto South

Tribunal Locations

The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal has eight regional offices which do a full range of business across the province where landlords and tenants can file applications, have their questions answered by a customer service representative, and attend hearings.

Most of the Tribunal's hearings are held in regional offices located in the following areas:

- London
- Hamilton
- Mississauga
- Toronto South (Downtown area)
- Toronto North (North York area)
- Toronto East (Scarborough area)
- Ottawa
- Sudbury

The Tribunal also held hearings at our Client Service Office in the city of Windsor. However in spring of 2006 the Windsor office moved to a new location joining our Service Ontario partners. The Windsor office has now become a Co-locate. (Please see the following page for more information regarding Co-locations).

Alternative Service Delivery

The partnership with other governmental bodies such as the one with the Ministry of Consumer and Business Services to deliver services to the public proves to be very positive. This way, the public is provided with convenient access to government services and information. The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal has also benefited through the affiliation with a service network to serve its clients in less populated areas.

At Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal Service Ontario/Government Information Centre Co-locations, landlords and tenants can file applications, and have their questions answered by a customer service representative. The co-locations are located in the following areas:

Barrie	Kingston	Thunder Bay
Kitchener	Owen Sound	Whitby
Peterborough	St. Catharines	Windsor

At Service Ontario/Government Information Centres, landlords and tenants can file applications and supporting documents. Staff of these centres cannot answer questions about the rights and obligations of tenants and landlords under the Tenant Protection Act; they can, however, accept applications on behalf of the Tribunal and provide access to information pamphlets and application forms. The Tribunal uses the services of the following Service Ontario/Government Information Centres:

Atikokan	Aurora	Bancroft	Barrie
Belleville	Blind River	Brampton	Brockville
Chapleau	Chatham	Cochrane	Cornwall
Downsview	Dryden	Elliot Lake	Espanola
Fort Frances	Geraldton	Gore Bay	Guelph
Hawkesbury	Hearst	Huntsville	Ignace
Iroquois Falls	Kapuskasing	Kenora	Kingston
Kirkland Lake	Kitchener	Lindsay	Marathon
Minden	Moosonee	New Liskeard	Nipigon
North Bay	Oakville	Owen Sound	Parry Sound
Pembroke	Peterborough	Rainy River	Red Lake
Renfrew	Sarnia	Sault Ste. Marie	Simcoe
Sioux Lookout	St. Catharines	Stratford	Sturgeon Falls
Thunder Bay	Timmins	Wawa	Whitby

Statistically the Service Ontario/Government Information Centre Processing Unit receives on average 230 applications per month in total from the above listed locations. These office locations provide our clients with convenient access to government services, particularly in Northern Ontario. The Tribunal has been able to reduce operating costs through the use of the full Service Ontario/Government Information Centre Network.

Call Centre

The Tribunal has a virtual call centre for handling customer inquiries. There is a toll-free number for callers who live outside Toronto (1-888-332-3234); and, in the Greater Toronto area the number is 416-645-8080. Customer service representatives are available during normal business hours. An extensive telephone script answers frequently asked questions 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. This year, the Tribunal responded to approximately 552,965 telephone calls. After hours and on weekends, a toll-free number is also available for faxing time sensitive documents and for ordering any of the Tribunal's public education brochures. These brochures are available in English and French. Selected brochures on the most important topics are available in seven other languages: Portuguese, Italian, Chinese, Punjabi, Polish, Tamil and Spanish.

The call centre employs the appropriate technology which has improved province-wide service delivery. The call centre of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal, apart from serving the public was also chosen to help the Government in handling telephone responses in other consultations (for example, in the Ministry's Residential Tenancies consultation; the Greenbelt consultation; the COMRIFF fund of Rural Affairs; and the Ministry of Labour new temporary help line for new inspectors).

E-government

The Tribunal's website (orht.gov.on.ca) is visited almost one million times each month. Our website is easily accessible to disseminate information to all of our clients. Clients can find information on our website about the progress of their application, the date of the hearing and whether an order has been issued. As well, all Tribunal forms and pamphlets, information on members, complaint procedures, relevant legislation, and rules and guidelines can be retrieved on line.

The Tribunal continues to take a phased approach to comply with the Government's commitment to multi-channel service delivery. The first phase allowed clients to inquire online on the status of their application; the second phase allowed for the scanning, interpretation and processing of applications; and the third phase allowed for a large majority of applications to be processed through teleform. The Tribunal continues to work towards enhancing its quality service for clients.

French Language Services

The Tribunal is committed to providing services in both official languages in accordance with the French Language Services Act. In designated areas, a completely fluent adjudicator will provide French hearings and orders will be translated where requested. All offices in designated areas have bilingual staff available for our French-speaking clients and staff are available at Service Ontario/Government Information counters who are able to provide services in each of the official languages.

ORDER SUMMARIES

Landlord Application

Subsection 138(6)

The landlord applied for an order to increase the rent charged by more than the guideline because they had done capital expenditure work in the residential complex.

In the application, the landlord claimed four capital expenditure items totalling $64,385.69:

1. Parking lot replacement in the amount of $38,092
2. Fire alarm retrofit in the amount of $18,955.05
3. Replacement of the garbage envelope in the amount of $6,199.09, and
4. Landscaping work in the amount of $1,139.55.

After considering the evidence and submissions, the Tribunal allowed the landlord's claims for the parking lot replacement and fire alarm retrofit, but not for the replacement of the garbage envelope or the landscape work.

In order to be considered in an application, a capital expenditure item must be completed within the 18-month period that ends 90 days before the first effective date of the first intended rent increase applied for in the application. The 18-month period for this application was from November 3, 2003 to May 3, 2005. Since the contractor's invoice indicated that the replacement of the garbage envelope was completed on October 3, 2003, the Tribunal found that this capital expenditure item could not be considered. With respect to the landscaping work, the Tribunal found that the work claimed was "maintenance work" and did not qualify as a capital expenditure item.

Based on the two allowed capital expenditure items, the landlord justified an increase of 0.84%. An order was issued permitting the landlord to increase the rent charged by 0.84% above the guideline.

Tenant Application

Section 35

The tenant applied for an order determining that the landlord harassed him, entered the rental unit illegally, changed the locking system for the unit without providing the tenant with a replacement key and interfered with the tenant's reasonable enjoyment.

The tenant moved into a basement unit in a house. After a while, the tenant began to suspect that the landlord was entering the rental unit while he was at school. To address the situation, the tenant posted a note on an internal door within the tenant's unit asking the landlord to stop entering the apartment uninvited. Upon discovering the note, the landlord became angry and gave the tenant notice to move out. The tenant agreed to move out at the end of January 2006.

The tenant found a new apartment in the area and gradually started moving his belongings to the new location. On January 30th, 2006, the tenant went to the rental unit to remove the last of his possessions. When he arrived, however, the tenant discovered that the screen door was locked. The tenant was unable to access his unit because the door to which the tenant had a key was behind the screen door. The tenant returned to the unit to recover his property on February 1st, 2nd and 3rd but was unsuccessful, as the screen door remained locked. On February 6th, the tenant attended the premises with the police; the landlord refused to cooperate with the officers and refused to return the tenant's property.

At the hearing, the landlord claimed that the tenant was lying. The landlord stated that he did not change the locks to the rental unit until early February, and that he did not start locking the screen door until February 1st. The landlord denied having kept any of the tenant's personal belongings.

After considering the evidence of both parties, the Tribunal found the tenant's case was more persuasive. The tenant and his witnesses were sincere and straightforward. The tenant had submitted pictures that showed his belongings were in the landlord's possession well after the end of the tenancy. In contrast, the Tribunal found the landlord's testimony evasive. The landlord's credibility was further undermined by his lack of cooperation with the police.

The Tribunal found that the landlord changed the locking system, by locking the screen door prior to the end of the tenancy. An order was issued requiring the landlord to pay the tenant $1,934 to compensate the tenant for his lost belongings, plus an additional $200 for the tenant's reasonable out of pocket expenses.

Tenant Application

Section 35

The tenants applied to the Tribunal for an order determining that the landlord gave a notice of termination in bad faith.

The tenants rented a single-family detached home from the landlord. During the tenancy, the landlord approached the tenants and inquired whether it would be possible for his son to move into the basement and in exchange, the landlord would reduce the tenants' rent. The tenants were not comfortable with this arrangement, and refused. Subsequently, the landlord served the tenants with written notice that he wished to terminate the tenancy because his son would be moving into the rental unit when the lease expired. The tenants made arrangements to move to another home, two doors away.

In support of their application, the tenants submitted evidence to show that shortly after they made arrangements to move, the landlord began placing ads in the newspaper to rent the home. After the tenants moved out, the upper floor of the home was rented to two women. As of the hearing date, more than 21 months had passed since the landlord served the tenants with notice, and the landlord's son still had not occupied any part of the home. In dispute of the tenants' application, the landlord argued that his son still had every intention of moving into the basement.

The Tribunal found that the "rental unit" was the entire home and the landlord could not give notice for personal use for just part of the rental unit. The Tribunal also found that the landlord's son failed to occupy the rental unit within a reasonable period of time after termination. For these reasons, the Tribunal concluded that the landlord served a notice of termination in bad faith. An order was issued requiring the landlord to pay the tenants a total of $1,670.50 for their increased rent, moving expenses, and legal fees.

Tenant Application

Section 144

The tenant applied to the Tribunal for an order determining that the landlord unlawfully retained the money she had paid for November's rent.

The tenant was renting the apartment on a monthly basis. On October 3, 2005, the tenant gave the landlord written notice that she would be vacating on November 15th. Both parties acknowledged that the tenant's notice did not comply with the legislative requirements in that it did not give the landlord 60 days notice. The tenant moved out of the unit on October 29th and returned the keys to the landlord on November 1st.

On or about November 3, 2005, the landlord re-rented the tenant's unit to a family whose home had been damaged or destroyed in a recent fire. The tenant argued that since the unit was re-rented, the landlord should return the $500 that she had paid for November's rent. In dispute, the landlord claimed that he should not have to repay the tenant because the arrangement he had made with this family was a short-term arrangement. In addition, there were three other vacant units in the complex that the landlord could have rented to the family.

The Tribunal found that although the tenant's notice was insufficient, the landlord had a responsibility to mitigate his losses by re-renting the unit as quickly as possible. Since the landlord received rent from another family for the tenant's unit, the tenant was relieved of her obligation to pay for November's rent. The tenant could not be required to continue to pay rent for a rental unit that was lawfully rented to someone else. An order was issued requiring the landlord to reimburse the tenant $500.

Tenant Application

Section 35

The tenant owned a mobile home and rented a site in the landlord's mobile home park. The tenant applied for an order determining that the landlord illegally entered the tenant's unit, that being the mobile home site, for the purpose of disposing of the tenant's property.

The tenant's son lived in the mobile home until it was destroyed by a fire in December 2004. In July 2005, the landlord sent the tenant a notice by registered mail. The notice informed the tenant that the landlord would be hiring a contractor to remove the debris left by the fire from the site. The landlord claimed that the debris posed a threat to public health and safety, especially to any children living in the immediate area. On September 13, 2005, a contractor came and removed the remains of the mobile home.

At the hearing, the tenant confirmed that he received the written notice from the landlord. The tenant explained that he did not take any steps to remove his property, because he felt the landlord would not proceed since the landlord had not complied with section 111 of the Tenant Protection Act (the Act). This section requires that before disposing of an abandoned mobile home, a landlord must notify the tenant of his intention to do so and must publish a notice in the local newspaper. Since the landlord did not publish a notice in the local paper, the tenant argued the landlord was not entitled to dispose of the mobile home.

In considering the evidence, the Tribunal noted that section 111 only applies if the tenant has vacated as a result of: a notice of termination, an agreement to terminate the tenancy, or an order from the Tribunal terminating a tenancy. Since the tenant did not vacate the mobile home for any of these reasons, the Tribunal found that section 111 of the Act did not apply to this situation.

The Tribunal found that the landlord disposed of the debris from a fire that the tenant refused to deal with, even after being given a formal request to do so. The tenant had from July 8, 2005 to September 13, 2005 to salvage anything of value from the site, but the tenant did not do so. The Tribunal found that the landlord's motivation to protect the general public from a health and safety hazard was not a breach of the Act. The tenant's application was dismissed.

Landlord Application

Subsection 86(1)

The landlord applied for an order to terminate the tenancy because the tenant did not pay the rent that she was required to pay for the period from July 1, 2005 to September 30, 2005. The tenant disputed the application on the grounds that the landlord was in serious breach of its maintenance obligations. The tenant and the tenant's common-law spouse had informed the landlord of outstanding maintenance issues starting in June of 2005. Children's Aid also wrote to the landlord's agent about the outstanding maintenance issues. The Protection Worker indicated that the lack of repair was so severe that it created a dangerous situation for the tenant's two children.

After considering the evidence, the Tribunal found that the landlord was in serious breach of its responsibilities and as a result, refused to terminate the tenancy despite the fact that the tenant was in arrears of rent. An order was issued requiring the tenant to pay the landlord the arrears of rent owing up to September 30, 2005.

Landlord Application

Section 81

The landlord applied for an order to evict the unauthorized occupants who were living in the rental unit, and for compensation for the use of the unit.

The landlord claimed that the tenant vacated the rental unit on or about September 7, 2005. Two days later, the landlord discovered two occupants living in the rental unit. When the occupants refused to leave, the landlord called the police. The landlord could not, however, recall the exact date that the call was made.

The occupants testified that the landlord showed them the rental unit on or about September 2, 2005 and agreed to enter into a tenancy agreement with them starting September 15th. The occupants paid the landlord a deposit in the amount of $100, for which they had a receipt that was signed by the landlord. The occupants further testified that they gave the landlord another $350 on September 13th, after which the landlord gave them the keys to the rental unit. On September 17th, the landlord discovered that the occupants had dogs living with them in the rental unit. Upon making this discovery, the landlord became upset and called the police.

The Tribunal found that the landlord failed to establish, on a balance of probabilities, that the occupants were not authorized to live in the residential unit. The evidence, including the receipt, indicated that the landlord and the occupants had entered into a tenancy agreement with respect to the rental unit. Since the parties had entered into a tenancy agreement, the 'occupants' were, in fact, 'tenants' within the meaning of the Act. An order was issued dismissing the landlord's application.

Landlord Application

Section 69

The landlord applied for an order to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenants because they committed an illegal act on the premises. The tenants reside in a residential complex which consists of two buildings.

There are three tenants named on the lease. Tenant A was charged and convicted with being in possession of an unlicensed 9mm handgun and assaulting a police officer. The illegal acts did not occur in the building where the tenants lived, but in the second building that also forms part of the residential complex.

At the time of the hearing, the only tenant continuing to reside in the rental unit was Tenant B. Tenant C had vacated and Tenant A had a probation order against him which prevented him from accessing the building.

The lawyer for Tenant B argued that since the illegal act was committed by Tenant A and there was no evidence that Tenant B participated in the illegal acts, the application should be dismissed. The landlord counter-argued that the tenants as a group constituted the tenancy and that they could not be separated.

The Tribunal found that the tenancy consisted of three tenants. Since there was one lease for all three parties, the three could not be separated into individual tenancies. On a balance of probabilities, the Tribunal concluded that a tenant of the rental unit committed an illegal act in the residential complex. An order was issued terminating the tenancy. Taking into consideration the fact that Tenant B had two young children and would need time to relocate the Tribunal ordered that the eviction should be delayed.

Landlord Application

Subsection 72(10)

The landlords applied to the Tribunal for an order terminating the tenancy because the tenants were in arrears of rent. An eviction order was issued, with a provision that allowed the tenants to void the order by paying $3,577 on or before January 31, 2006.

The tenants filed a motion to void the eviction order, claiming that they had made the necessary payments. As a result, an order voiding the eviction order was issued, without notice to the landlords and without holding a hearing. Subsequently, the landlords filed a motion to set-aside the order to void, claiming that they did not receive full payment by January 31, 2006.

At the hearing, the landlords testified that as of January 31, there was still $1,500 owing. The landlords checked their mailbox several times on that day but no further payments were received. Mid-morning on February 1, 2006, the landlords discovered that the tenants had placed an envelope in their mailbox. The envelope contained a money order in the amount of $1,000 and a cheque in the amount of $500. Documentary evidence showed that the cheque cleared the bank on February 10, 2006.

The tenants argued that they placed the envelope in the landlords' mailbox on January 31, 2006. In the event that the landlords' motion was to be allowed, however, the tenants asked the Tribunal to grant them relief from eviction due to the fact that the tenants have five children, and their only source of income was from disability and support payments.

Based on the balance of probabilities, the Tribunal found that the tenants did not put the envelope in the mailbox until February 1, 2006 and that the cheque did not clear the bank until February 10th. Because the payment was not made in full by January 31, 2005, the Tribunal concluded that the tenants did not make the payments required to void the order. With respect to the tenants request for relief from eviction, the Tribunal found that it did not have the authority to consider granting relief from eviction in this case. Since the tenants did not make the required payments, the original eviction order stands. The Member who issued the original eviction order already considered the question of relief from eviction, and had granted the tenants a further two-month grace period to come up with the arrears. The Tribunal could not revisit this issue again.

The landlords' motion to set aside the order to void was granted. The original eviction order was returned to full force and effect.

Tenant Application

Subsection 7(2)

The tenants applied for an order to determine whether the Act applies to their rental unit. Since 1969, the tenants have been renting a two-storey farmhouse on 70 acres of land. From 1969 to 1996, the tenants used this land to farm horses and cattle and to crop hay. From 1998 to 2004, the tenants leased the land to local farmers at the same rate as the tenants paid to the landlord.

The tenants had signed a lease with the landlord which provided that they would pay a yearly rent for each acre of leased land, plus an aggregate annual rent for the buildings located on the land. The lease stated that it was deemed not to be a residential lease and therefore was not subject to the Landlord and Tenant Act or any successor Acts. The lease further stated that the use of the premises was for the purpose of the operation of a farm.

The Tribunal found that the premises have been occupied predominately for agricultural purposes with living accommodation attached. The occupancy for both purposes was under a single lease and the same person occupied the premises and the living accommodation. The Tribunal found that the relationship between the landlord and tenants was exempt pursuant to section 3(j) and therefore, was not covered by the Tenant Protection Act.

Landlord Application

Section 69

The landlord applied for an order to terminate the tenancy because the tenant had been persistently late in paying the rent from November 1, 2004 to April 1, 2005.

The tenant lived in the rental unit for over 31 years. The tenant did not dispute the fact that rent payments were made late during the period claimed by the landlord. The tenant pointed out, however, that there were no arrears owing. In his defence, the tenant explained that he suffers from a neurological disorder which weakens his nerves and muscles and that he suffered from this disorder more notably during the period claimed in the application. The tenant submitted that his lateness in paying rent was attributable to this disorder.

The Tribunal found that the tenant was persistently late in paying his rent to a level that, if no other relevant factors existed, would normally lead to an order granting the landlord's application. In this case, however, the tenant suffered from a neurological disorder which contributed to his persistent lateness. Where a tenant suffers from a disability, the Tribunal has an obligation to consider the Human Rights Code (the Code). Under the Code, the duty not to discriminate includes an obligation to accommodate people with a disability, unless this would cause undue hardship. The landlord did not provide any evidence to suggest that it would be an undue hardship for the landlord to permit periods of lateness, given the tenant's disability. Even if the Code was not a factor in its decision, the Tribunal found that it would not have granted the landlord's application, given the unfairness of terminating a 31-year tenancy for a relatively brief period of lateness. An order was issued dismissing the landlord's application.

Tenant Application

Section 34

The tenant applied for an order determining that the landlord failed to meet his maintenance obligations.

The tenant claimed that the water supply to the rental unit was inadequate and intermittent from December 2004 to July 2005. Although there were times when the water supply was sufficient, there were many occasions where the tenant was unable to use the kitchen and bathroom facilities. The tenant informed the landlord of the water supply problem in December 2004, and provided additional verbal notices in the months that followed. The landlord failed to address the problem, so the tenant contacted the municipal property standards department. Upon an inspection of the rental unit by a Property Standards Officer, the landlord was ordered to improve the supply of potable water to the rental unit.

In his defence, the landlord explained that he inspected the rental unit on three occasions in January and February. During the inspections, the supply of water appeared to be adequate. In addition, the landlord had not received any complaints about the supply of water from any other tenant in the complex. Not believing that a problem existed, the landlord did not take any steps to correct the problem until he received the work order from the city. The repairs to the water supply were completed in July 2005.

The Tribunal found that the landlord failed to meet his obligations to maintain the rental unit by failing to provide the tenants with an adequate supply of water from December 2004 to July 2005. An order was issued requiring the landlord to pay the tenant a rent abatement of $1,300.
